How To Triple Your Writing Speed And Become A Book Writing Machine How to Write a Book More Efficiently

If you're a busy author or writer and you never have enough time to spend writing your books the way you'd like, we're going to reveal an secret way you can triple your writing speed, save dozens of hours each week and quickly become a book writing machine.

Planning a book or novel can be a grueling process for any author. Often you need a lot of facts, figures and details to help research and write your story. That's why it usually takes many writers months or even years to finish writing their books.

One author recently commented on a blog post that it took her 10 years to start writing her first novel! If you don't want to wait that long and need to start a little sooner, it's important that you only do the research you need so you can start writing as soon as possible.
Writing In The Fast Lane

In the old days, before we had cell phones, email, sms, television etc authors could go almost anywhere, sit down and write free from distractions. But today, with busy lives we race faster than ever before and finding the time to write can sometimes feel like getting caught in a traffic jam during rush hour. There's just so much to do that progress is slow and it takes forever to get where we're going.

That's why it's more important than ever to use the time you do have to focus on your writing. One of the biggest challenges many authors face, especially when writing their first book, is doing research. Research is the foundation of your book, novel or screenplay. It allows you to develop your characters, plot lines, themes and concepts to construct the story the way you'd like.

Today despite the many options available when researching your book, it's often difficult to find the exact information you need very quickly.

Whether you're an author, novelist or screenwriter, it doesn't really matter. Being able to do fast effective research and become an expert on your topic is crucial to your success as a writer.

Of course we all know, becoming an expert writer on anything takes a lot of work. Usually you're not just searching for one article, resource or website but dozens or even hundreds of them. Then you have to take all these different resources you find and weave them together into rich compelling stories, characters, concepts and ideas for your book. But without the right tools you can easily spend months doing research alone and never even get started writing your book.

Starting Your Research Right?

These days Google is the first place nearly everyone goes when doing research. But while it's far more convenient than going to your local library, doing an online search often takes an eternity just to click through the thousands of results pages. In fact most people give up in frustration after the second or third results page. And if you're writing a book or novel, your problem only gets worse as you might have dozens of other topics you still need to research.

One reason why search engines slow you down is that they're very static. They only give you results based on your keywords. That means if you don't know "exactly" what you're looking for, it can take a very long time to find what you need. And while there are several books that teach online searching, not everyone has the time to learn all the latest strategies and finish writing their book at the same time.

Instead of using just one or two search engines and having to stumble through thousands of search results, wouldn't it be nice if there was a faster way to scan more of the entire web quickly and easily with just a few clicks of your mouse?
Lightning Fast Research Tools

In the past there weren't any tools that could do this for you. But today there are a few that can accomplish this. In fact, some of the latest research tools, like Research Wizard Pro for writers, can act like a personal assistant and allow you to instantly "switch" between dozens of search engines with your mouse as well as brainstorm hundreds of creative ideas for your topics that you may have never considered.

Perhaps you need a PDF, an image, audio or video clip to give you fresh ideas for your story. Or word documents and power point presentations that experts have already written so you don't have to re-invent the wheel. Today with these special research tools designed for authors, you can choose a variety of different search options to instantly discover amazing resources on the web you may have never found on your own.

Believe me, nothing is more frustrating than submitting your search and getting back thousands of semi-related results that take time to go through. But with tools such as Research Wizard Pro, you can place your results pages on a timer that you control so they advance automatically to the next page just like a slide show. No more stiff joints or aching fingers or from clicking on your mouse all day long.
Becoming A Book Writing Machine

But what all this really means is, if you depend on fast effective research for your fiction or non-fiction writing, using research tools like Research Wizard Pro and others will give you the ability to search more of the entire internet faster to find exactly what you need with less work. From encyclopedias and maps, dictionaries, audio, video people, places, to Bible verses, history, quotes, shopping, health, travel etc. you'll have all of these search options in one convenient place. What normally takes 98% of most writers weeks or even months to find, you'll discover in just a few short hours or even minutes with these tools.

If you want to triple your writing speed and become a book writing machine, I recommend using some of the latest writing research tools for authors to save weeks, months, or even years doing research so you can start writing and publishing your books as soon as possible. You'll find that using these research tools will quickly help you get your writing career on the fast track to success.
