Choose the Best Golf Driver for Your Game

Posted by ak47xxxxx - 2010/03/19 15:52

Technology in the field of golf club design has made huge advances over the last decade. Finding the best discount golf clubs for your golf game is important to saving strokes off the tee and gaining an advantage over an opponent or course.

There are several things to consider when searching for a driver suited to any swing or body-type. Don't be fooled by the flair. Lots of clubs have added details that offer cosmetic appeal but don't necessarily cater to any swing. The taylormade r9 driver is a good one.

The head of the club should be lofted in accordance with handicap. High handicappers tend to have slower swing speeds and should purchase taylormade r9 irons with a high degree of loft.

The face of the club as it relates to a golfer's swing should be promoting spin in the opposite direction. Golfers who tend to push or slice the ball might want to get the callaway ft-iq driver with an offset face that encourages a draw. Offset faces look closed when held square with the stance.

Another key aspect of choosing a driver for your game is getting fitted so the driver is tailored to your own body mechanics. Purchasing a driver packed with the newest technologies at the highest price point doesn't accomplish anything if the club isn't fitted properly or appropriate for a player's swing. The callaway ft-9 driver is very good. Though power is an important part of scoring on the course, it should never be sacrificed for accuracy. Staying out of the rough will save more strokes than adding 30 meters, only to take a swim. ishiner
